United Nations contributions to national evaluation capacity development and the evolution of national evaluation systems

An overview of implementation of General Assembly Resolution 69/237

Box 1. Resolution GA69/237 of December 2014 on building capacity for the evaluation of development activities at country level Reiterates the importance of building national capacity for the evaluation of development activities.

Reaffirms that national capacity for the evaluation of development activities may be further strengthened by entities of the United Nations Development System upon request and in accordance with the principle of national ownership and with the national policies and priorities defined by Member States.

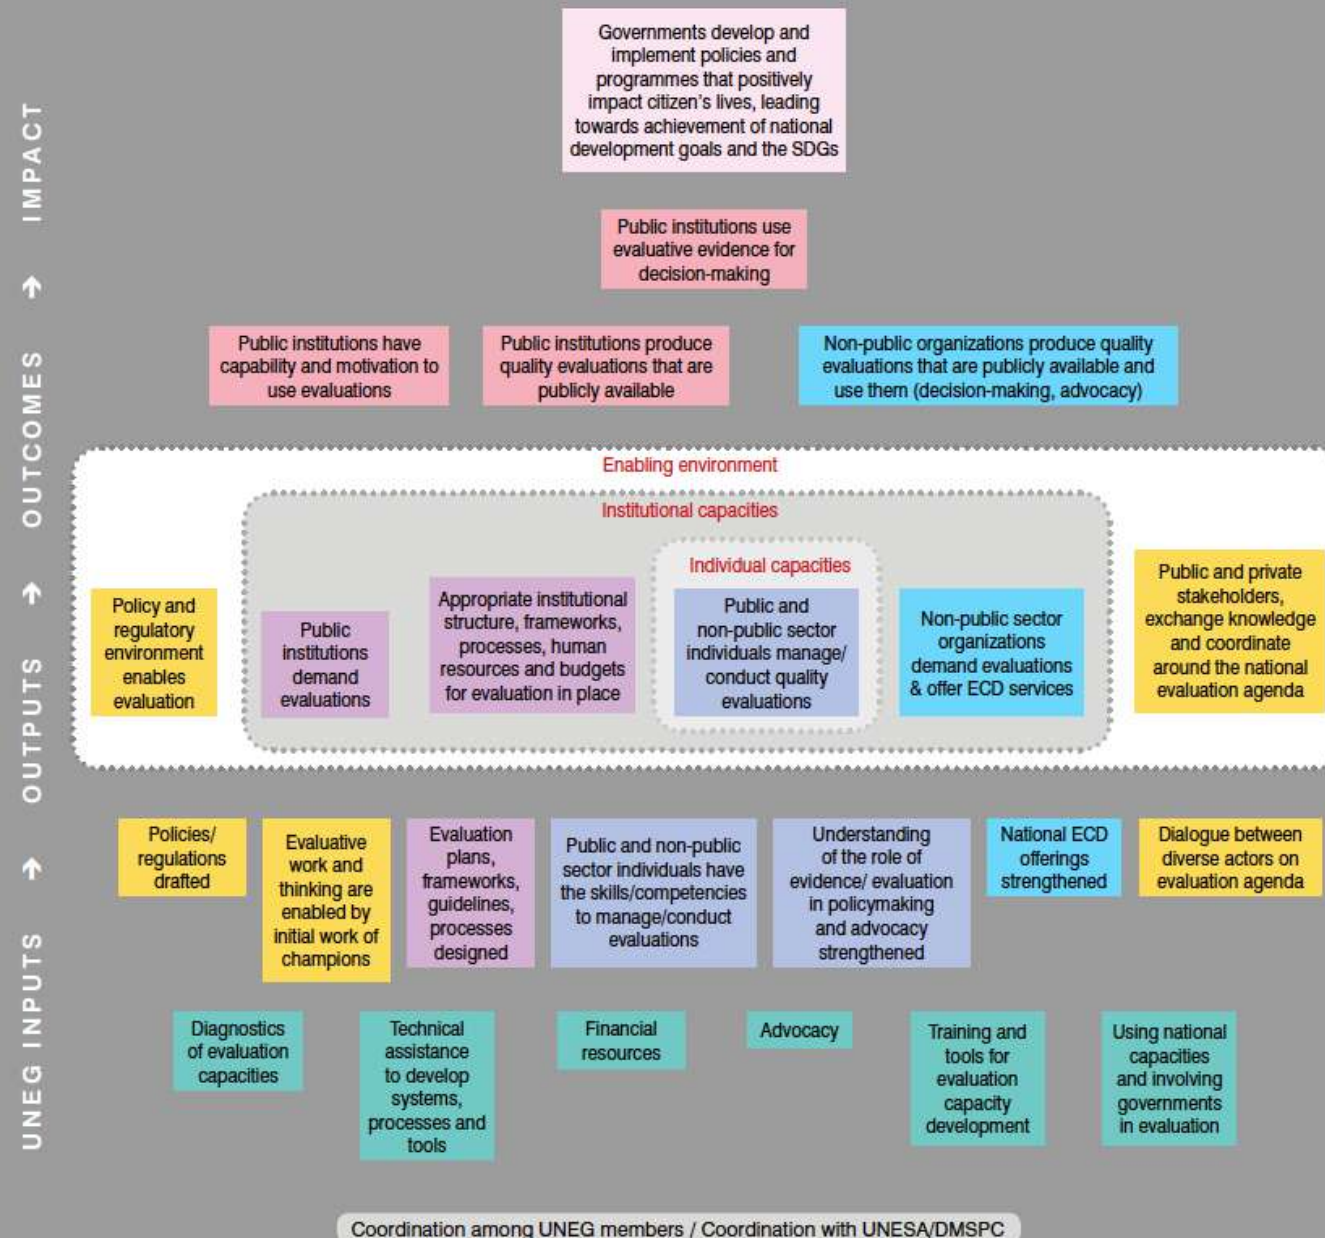

- 1. Notes that evaluation at the country level should be voluntary and carried out upon request by Member States.
- 2. Invites the entities of the United Nations Development System, with the collaboration of national and international stakeholders to support, upon request, efforts to further strengthen the capacity of Member States for evaluation, upon request, and in accordance with their national policies and priorities.

UNEG definition of NECD

- National Evaluation Capacity Development is the process whereby state and non-state entities and individuals expand, reinforce and sustain national capacity to manage, produce and use evaluation
- NECD supports, through direct or indirect efforts, the strengthening of a country-owned national system within a particular cultural, social and political context

Theory of Change

Research based on

- Survey of all UN agencies, 14 dealing with NECD responded
- Case studies of Philippines, Sri Lanka, Morocco, Kenya, Costa Rica and Benin
- 76 interviews
- Search of the main evaluation repositories to see how many of the evaluations done in each country could be accessed publicly
- Extensive work in the UNEG Working Group

Recommendation 1. All United Nations agencies should conduct their evaluations in a way that fosters national capacity development.

- 1.1 Country to play meaningful role in evaluation governance
- 1.2 Joint and country-led evaluations
- 1.3 Use national evaluation systems if they exist
- 1.4 Use and strengthen local evaluators

Recommendation 2. In line with GA Resolution 69/237, UN agencies and their evaluation functions should continue to support the capacity development of national evaluation ecosystems, including support to the enabling environment, institutional and individual capacity.

- 2.1 Support analysis of S/W of the system and development of capacity development plan
- 2.2 Support engagement of senior policy-makers – use joint and country led evaluations to pilot the system
- 2.3 Involve non-state actors
- 2.4 Advocate for integration of SDGs, climate, gender etc

Recommendation 3. All UN agencies should coordinate and collaborate on NECD at corporate, regional and country levels, allocating adequate time and resources.

- 3.1 Include NECD as part of their mandates
- 3.2 Ensure inter-agency information sharing/collaboration at all levels
- 3.3 Include NECD as explicit part of country programmes, ideally jointly with other agencies
